Towards Global Eminence
Our humanity in this twenty-first century has undergone dramatic change. The rise of globalization, the dominance of information technology, the liberalization of states, and increased societal awareness of impact of various global institutions such as business, civil society, and government on pressing global agenda of our communities and nations have all been suggested as reasons to reflect upon our calling as members of higher education in today’s turbulent world.

Indeed, the ideals of tolerance and peace, cultural diversity, and sustainability must be realized in harmony among all responsible stakeholders in our global community. To that end, Kyung Hee University established the Global Collaborative Summer Program centered on the main theme of “Humanity, Civilization, and Global Governance” in order to provide students and professors from world’s most prestigious universities with an unique platform of global intellectual community to discuss pressing global challenges and their solutions.

Building upon the two-year success of the Penn-Kyung Hee Collaborative Summer Program launched in 2006, the joint initiative of Kyung Hee University and University of Pennsylvania, the Global Collaborative seeks to promote a better understanding of the East Asian region and the world, in tandem with the current quests for “world peace” and “global common good.” It also aims to provide a new paradigm of higher education for the emerging global agenda by consciously integrating education, research, and service.

The Global Collaborative Summer Program has been originally based on the institutional agreement between Kyung Hee University and University of Pennsylvania, which was later joined by other prestigious universities such as Peking University of China, Ritsumeikan University of Japan, Moscow State University of Russia as well as international organizations such as the United Nations and Conference of NGOs (CoNGO).

Through high-quality research, education and diverse modules on Humanity, Civilization, and Global Governance, we hope this program will present an opportunity for students around the world to come together for a better understanding of each other and to reflect upon their emerging mission for the global agenda. We strongly believe that while participating this unique summer program all the participants can explore the common norms, tasks, and goals for the future of global community in the 21st Century.

Peace & Development

- UN and Global Governance

  John Ikenberry
  Albert G. Milbank Professor, Princeton University
  Global Eminent Scholar, KHU

  Hyun Kim
  Professor, KHU

This course will explore the history and theory of global governance with special attention to the role and activities of the United Nations. We start with a survey of the history and contending views of international organizations and governance of world affairs. Next, we look at the practice of global governance since 1945 on a range of issues. We look at specific areas where the United Nations is involved—security, economics, development, human rights, and environment. At the end of the class, we should have a good understanding of the limits and promise of international organizations—particularly the UN.

- The United Nations System: Global Cooperation with Civil Society - bases, structures, purposes, achievements, opportunities, blockages, risks

  Cyril Ritchie
  President, CoNGO

  Heung-Soon Park
  Professor, SunMoon University
  President, KACUNS
  (Korean Academic Council on the UN system)

This course will explore how the entire United Nations System (some 50 different entities) coexists with and sometimes without—thousands of Civil Society/Non-Governmental Organizations, working in innumerable fields of human (and governmental) endeavor. These include Peace, Disarmament, Population, Sustainable development, Human rights/women’s rights/children’s rights, Employment, Youth, Health, Education, Refugees and so forth. The United Nations has hundreds of Conventions and Treaties that set standards for human (and governmental) behavior: the course will review the role of Civil Society/NGOs in achieving and implementing these international legal instruments.

And in an overarching manner, the course will suggest opportunities for today’s university students to participate in meeting the immense global challenges dealt with by the indispensable United Nations System.
The Politics of Humanitarian Action

Over the last two centuries, and more particularly over the last two decades, we have witnessed an impressive expansion of organized humanitarianism, or the institutionalization of the desire to reduce the suffering of others. There is now a network of states, international organizations, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs) that constitute the international humanitarian enterprise. Their existence has helped to create and been nourished in turn by a complex array of normative and legal principles. This network and the normative fabric have resulted in something that resembles a system of global humanitarian governance?that is, humanitarian action is organized to help protect and assist distant strangers, and more recently to alleviate the causes of suffering as well. The intertwining of compassion and governance, however, signals that humanitarianism is more complicated than merely helping those in need. After all, isms invariably are less pure in practice than they are in theory.

Sustainable Development and the UN

In this course, experts working with the UN system share their knowledge and experience on sustainable development. Since the Rio conference in 1992, efforts of the global community for improving human well-being and sustainability of the planet have centered on the concept of sustainable development. However, the world has experienced uneven and insufficient progress in pursuing sustainable development sometimes due to multiple crises ranging from financial turmoil, to volatile energy/food price to climate-related disasters. In this journey of the global community to pursue sustainable development, the UN system has played a pivotal role in setting the agendas and formulating norms to tackle emerging challenges, bringing countries together into new global and regional platforms for action, mobilizing support for countries left behind, and monitoring progress. This course will provide unique perspectives on sustainable development challenges and international processes before and beyond the Rio+20.

Humanity & Civilization

Sociology of religion and the role of religion in international development

Worldwide social development professionals are challenged to find new resources to meet the needs of residents and to solve social and environmental problems. While many social development concepts and ideological tenets are borrowed from world religions; social development professionals make little attempt to capitalize the power and resources of organized religion and harness it to serve people in need. This course will introduce students to understand religion in an organized manner and then will discuss its role in social development in East Asia and globally.

East Asian Security: New Dynamics and Power Relations

This course describes the historical evolution of international security in the Asia-Pacific since the end of Second World War, and explore its Cold War derivation and analyzes fundamental elements and factors to underpin regional security in the Post-Cold War.

Korean Language

Promotion of speaking/listening competency and practical writing/reading skills based on various situations and language functions radically divided into 6 levels for student self advancement in the academic as well as survival Korean language purpose.

* This course will be taught in Korean. The registration is not available for Korean native speakers.
Global Collaborative 2013 Summer Program

• Chinese Politics: A review of domestic and foreign politics in China from revolution to reform

Lowell Dittmer
Professor, University of California at Berkeley
Editor-in-Chief, Asian Survey

China has created its own distinctive pathway to becoming one of the world’s largest economies—and the country’s economic and political development over the next decade will have profound implications for the two Koreas and the rest of the world. Knowledge of contemporary China is therefore essential for anyone who seeks to understand politics, business and international affairs in the twenty-first century. This course provides a sweeping overview of the rise of contemporary China, from its revolutionary origins to the era of reform and opening to the outside world.

• Global Consciousness & Service

• Social Economics: An Economic Perspective on Human Behavior

Femida Handy
Professor, University of Pennsylvania
Editor-in-Chief, Nonprofit and Voluntary Sector Quarterly

Following in the footsteps of Nobel laureate Gary Becker, this course examines everyday human and organizational decision making using an economic perspective. As a society, we choose many different ways to organize different aspects of our lives. The institutions and organizations we choose to provide us with the necessities and comforts of life range from the fundamental institutions of family and religious organizations, to firms in the capitalist market, NGOs, and democratically elected governments.

• Diversity in Organizations and Society: Opportunities and Challenges

Avner Ben-Ner
Professor, University of Minnesota

Yang-Kyun Kim
Professor, Kyung Hee University

This course will focus on the individual, dyadic, group, organization, community, society, regional and global levels. It will examine the growing mingling of people from diverse backgrounds associated with the movement of people within and across countries. An important aspect of the course will concern measures that can be adopted at all levels in order to mitigate the negative effects of this mingling of diverse people. The issue of how to achieve peaceful coexistence at all levels will be a central component of the course.

• Fast Growing Economies and Roles of Government Policies

Hyun Park
Professor, Kyung Hee University

This course analyzes economic fundamentals and roles of government on persistent economic growth. The course consists of three main topics. First, the course outlines basic theories for explaining short- and long-term economic growth; second, studies the role of government policies for economic growth; third, examines a few example of fast-growing countries and their lessons from, for example, European experiences after the Industrial Revolution and Korean experiences during 1955~2010. The audacious quest is to discover the means by which poor countries becomes rich like European and North America. This is, the course intends to answer whether historical and recent growth experiences and their governmental policies can be duplicated for less developed economies, e.g., South Asian, African and Latin American countries.
Global Collaborative 2013 Summer Program

- Peace Through Commerce: The United Nations Global Compact and the Future of the Economy

  Oliver Williams
  Professor, University of Notre Dame
  International Scholar, KHU
  Director, Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business

  The purpose of the course is to introduce the student to the United Nations Global Compact, the largest voluntary corporate social responsibility project with over 6000 businesses in 135 countries. The course is designed to examine the ten principles of the Global Compact and their focus on human rights, labor rights, environmental issues and corruption and to understand why the compact is so attractive to many stakeholders of business. Thinking clearly about how one integrates environmental, social and governance issues into corporate management will be enhanced by having several company officers from companies that have signed the compact speak to the class. The students will have the opportunity to meet business leaders and get some insight on the changing role of business in society. The readings and class discussion will enable the student to develop an understanding of how companies can restore public trust in business by a focus on the moral and ethical values so important to many in society.

- Leadership in Global Governance: Ethical Globalization, CSR & Sustainability

  Joe W. (Chip) Pitts III
  Professor, Stanford University
  Former Chief Legal Officer, Nokia, Inc.

  The shift from an inter-national system of nation states to a more complex network of public and private actors presents both new challenges and new opportunities for alignment and positive change at every level of the new global system. The “wicked problems” in global governance, including human rights, trafficking, poverty, conflict, war, climate change, and the need to respect the environment, increasingly overlap with problems of corporate governance, ethical globalization, and corporate social responsibility, calling for new personal and organizational leadership and related skills. Through the lens of global and comparative corporate social responsibility and sustainability, this course will examine these persistent global problems and “new governance” multistakeholder, public-private partnership, and other innovative approaches to solving them, while giving students experience in building the leadership, communication, negotiation, interpersonal, intrapersonal, cultural, and other practical skills necessary to rise to the challenge of good governance today.
The student orientation will take place at July 1. Students are advised to arrive in Korea 1-2 days prior to their session to allow them time to adapt to the new environment.

About Korea

Location
The Korean Peninsula is located in North-East Asia. It is bordered by the Amnok River (Yalu River) to the northwest, separating Korea from China, and the Duman River (Tumen River) to the northeast which separates Korea from both China and Russia. The country itself is flanked by the Yellow Sea to its west and the East Sea to the east. There are several notable islands that surround the peninsula including Jeju, Ulleungdo and Dokdo.

The Korean peninsula is roughly 1,030 km (612 miles) long and 175 km (105 miles) wide at its narrowest point. Korea’s total land area is 100,140 sq km, and it has a population of 48.7 million people (2009).

Because of its unique geographical location, Korea is a very valuable piece of land and an international hub of Asia.

Division of the 38th Parallel
The Korean peninsula is divided just slightly north of the 38th parallel. The Republic of Korea in the south and the communist government of North Korea are separated by a demilitarized zone.

Weather
Korea has four seasons, with a wet monsoon/summer season in the middle of the year, and a cold winter from November to March. The island of Jeju off the southern coast is the warmest and wettest place in the country. The ideal time to visit Korea is during the autumn months (September-November). During this time, the country experiences warm, sunny weather, skies that are cobalt blue and spectacular foliage that is perhaps the biggest draw. Winters are cold and dry and are a good time to visit if you are interested in winter sports as there are numerous ski resorts. Spring (April-May) is also beautiful with all the cherry blossoms in bloom. However, it is very busy and one need to book in advance to ensure accommodation is available. The summer months are muggy and hot, and rather crowded. It is also when the monsoon season begins so many activities are subject to the fluctuations of heavy rain.
Population & Language
As of 2010, the population of the Republic of Korea stood at 48,580,000 with roughly 486 people per square kilometer. Conversely, the population of North Korea as of 2010 was estimated at 24,051,218. Korean (Hangeul) is official language in Korea and invented by King Sejong during the Joseon Dynasty.

Transportation
Public transportation in Korea is very convenient and relatively cheap. Regular bus fare is 1,000 won, Subway fare is 1,000 won and taxi fare is 2,400 won up to first 2 Kilometers. For more information, Please refer Visit Korea website (http://english.visitkorea.or.kr)
